● WHEN it comes to looking after horses there's not much that Nicola Stone and Michaela Parsons (pictured above) don't know about the subject.

The girls, employed at the Old Mill Stables at Lelant Downs, near St. Ives, have each gained a groom's diploma.

They are believed to be the first in the county to achieve the National Association of riding School's diploma.

Nicola, of the Cottage Hotel at Carbis Bay, has been employed there for two years and Michaela, of Towednack for six months. Both are former students at the Penwith Sixth Form College.

Nicola, aged 20, and Michaela, 19, work as teachers at the stables, which keep a total of 32 horses.

New supermarket food firm named

GATEWAY Foodmarkets have been named as the company intending to move into Tekoa's proposed new supermarket at Hayle.

The identity of the firm has been revealed amid a growing controversy over the scheme (see stories —Page three).

Tekoa is seeking permission to build the supermarket on South Quay and fill in part of Penpol Dock to provide parking and an access.

STORE

Penwith Council has been told that Cignet Construction Ltd. plan to build the store if it is given the go-ahead.

Cignet has announced that an agreement has been reached with the harbour owners to purchase the area of land needed for the Gateway, said Cignet, would also not wish to move onto South Quay unless infilling of Penpol Dock—providing a link with existing shops at Penpol Terrace as well as car parking space—took place.

Slade's, of Foundry, also proposes to build a store—of some 25,000 sq. ft. with parking for 167 cars—on its current factory site at South Quay.

Mr. Owen Philip last week called on Tekoa and Slade's to work together to produce a development project which would be of benefit to the town and its residents.

"They should be brought together to iron out their differences," he told the town council. "It is about time that the difficulties between them are resolved."
